The Workshop on Critical Accounting will serve as a forum to explore the role that accounting is currently playing and, perhaps more importantly, the role that it could play in mitigating and overcoming such problems as inequitable distribution of wealth across the world, the economic exploitation of children and adults, abuse of human rights, climate change, and other interrelated problems associated with the current paradigm of economic development. The main objectives of the workshop will be to build bridges between academics working in the field of critical accounting, civil organizations and business enterprises, in order to identify better ways of dealing with these key problems in contemporary society.
